"What then?" asks Montgomery, and the Advertiser answers the question in a long article, the abstract of which is as follows: Montgomery will have a line shorter by eighty-six miles than the shortest existing line from the cotton section of the north and northwest; competition will be stim-ulated by the increased number of west-ern connections, and freights consequently reduced. Montgomery will become the entrepot for the great cotton productions of Alabama and Southern Georgia; she will be likewise freed from the control of the "Georgia Railroad Ring;" and not only will Montgomery be benefitted but Alabama will share in the advantages resulting from the negotiations—mineral resources will be developed, the credit of the State rendered less liable to be impair ed when the bonds of the road are indorsed by a rich corporation, and in a short time two millions of dollars will be spent along the line, of which sum the greater portion will remain in the State.

The Death of Auber. The Death of Auber.

Our dispatches this morning announce the death of Daniel Francois Esprit Auber, one of the greacest of the French composers, at the ripe old age of eighty-evens. Auber was born at Caen, in France, Jan. 20, 1784. Bred, to his father's mereantile profession, a brief experience taught him his unfitness for its prosecution, and he returned to the study of music, for which he had shown remarkable aptitude in his youth. He was placed under the care of Cherubini, and after a severe course of study he appeared before the pub-in Paris, completely turned the tables in his favor and opened the prosperous career which has made his name so famous. His more popular opens since produced are, perhaps, Messensills and Fre Dissels, though all of his works, of which he wrote a great number, were received with great favor. Of late years he has not been so prolific of publications, content, as he certainly might be, with the name he had siready won.

Ander at the outset was an imitator of Rossial, but with increasing experience, and the confidence born of success, he ventured a style of his own, whose chief characteristics are clearness, sprightliness and grace, with a deal of pathos, to which he has since steadily adhered. His greatest success has been in buffo operas, which are models of light and graceful composition. It is said that he would ever hear his opens a second time, either to avoid repeating his deas, or, like a conscientious artist, to devote himself at once to new labors.

like a conscientions artist, to devote himself at once to new labors.

His death will leave a void not easily, filled, and his mantle will but illy grace the shouldens of Offenbach or the rest of that vitiated school. He diese full of honors, and France even in this hour of danger and of gloom halts a moment to drop a tear and breathe a regret over the bler of one who has contributed so much to her volume of original musical compositions, and whose life has been outlined in the good humor, the grateful enjoyment of the blessings literally showered upon him, and the tendernoss of the heritages he has left to his disciples and admirers, both the friends of a good man.

the New York offers for not so much service, gets over $100 per month. To retain honest, capable and efficient officers lite these, the pay must be made respectable, for the laborer is worthy of his bire. It is a shame that for such invaluable services as our police rendered on election day in November, and on yesterday, they are not better compensated. To eithe the police but it will prove to be the worst productive in the long run, for men cannot work always on half pay, and will not.

J. A. D. FLOWERS FOR THE DEAD. An End to Offerings Supplied by the Undertaker.

An End to Offerings Supplied by the Undertaker.

[From the Christian Usion.]

One of those customs which, beautiful in their inception, run into extrawgance and are abused by bad taste and misapplication, has reached its culmination of aburdaty, and is about ready to die a natural death. We alimited to the use of flowers at funcrals. It was a delicate into which first suggested the died to the dead bate the simple honey flower, the dead bate the simple honey flower, esarcely more freel and lovely than the human blossom it seemed to symbolize. The light wreath that rested, a virgin coronal, upon the brow of the maiden on her bier, or the modest bunch of rose buds and geranium leaves that pressed her bosom, presented an incongruity to the mind. "Sweets to the sweets," we said, with Sunkspear's Dusish queen; or addea with mourning brother.

And from her fair and unpolitied flesh may violets spring!"
But soon these touch ing tokens began to be used without reference to appropriateness. The remnins of old people began to be adorned with these emblems of youth and freshness—a bideous discrepancy. His constitution would have had a better significance. Flowers as a funeral accompaniment now became "the fashion," and were employed without discrimination and without taste. What had been the graceful tributes of friendly sympathy were exposed for sale by the florist, and furnished by the undertaker, to be "put in the bill." Great lumbeding crosses, and anchors of hope, and crown of immortality current of the put in the bill." Great lumbeding crosses, and anchors of hope, and crown of immortality current of hope, and crown of immortality current of the put in the bill." Great lumbeding crosses, and anchors of hope, and crown of immortality current of the put in the bill." Great lumbeding crosses, and anchors of hope, and crown of immortality current of the put in the bill." Great lumbeding crosses, and anchors of hope, a we were justified in looking for a reaction to prossic common sense.

We were not surprised to hear, the other day, that a judicious lady had refused to allow the many floral gufa which she had received as funeral offerings at the obsequies of her son to be used about his bler, with the exception of a spring or two, far down oneath the cofficient of the series simplicity of our fathers, and to lay our dead quitely away, accepting the stern fact of their mortality, with no other alleviation than such as may be farrished by a trust in the power of the cross, and the hope of a blessed resurrection.
